

Energy Management training Implementing an ISO 50001 Energy Management System

What is it?

ISO 50001 Energy Management is the best way to cut your energy costs. It can also help you to reduce your environmental impact and meet emissions reductions targets. The international standard outlines a best practice framework for managing your energy performance – and now you can take the next steps towards implementing your own ISO 50001 energy management system with this course.

Why do I need it?

You may not have an energy management system in place, but you want to apply ISO 50001 to your business. This standard is designed for organizations of all sizes and sectors, so this course is the ideal way to start implementation from scratch. You will interpret ISO 50001 requirements and how to apply these to your own business. We'll take you through the journey from planning to implementing your own energy management system.

How will I benefit?

It provides a structured approach towards measuring and monitoring how much energy you use. You can identify ways to cut your energy use and change how you operate to improve overall performance. ISO 50001 outlines how to get more from less energy by building more efficient technical and behavioural practices. And as your business becomes more energy efficient, you can also cut carbon emissions – meeting government reduction targets and establishing better environmental credentials.

What will I learn?

This two-day course will help you understand and apply energy management. You will interpret ISO 50001 requirements and apply them to your business. Our tutors will help you identify the right resources to implement the standard successfully. You'll learn to develop your own energy policies, processes, targets and measuring methods. And you'll be able to design and implement an ISO 50001 management system specific to your business. Finally, we'll explain how you can integrate this system with other relevant and certified management systems, such as ISO 14001 Environmental Management.
