

BSI Certificate in Occupational Health and Safety Management Systems

What is it?

The BSI Certificate introduces you to occupational health and safety management and provides a qualification. You'll study in your own time on this distance learning course, learning the essentials in occupational health and safety without disrupting other work commitments. The course is based on OHSAS 18004 and OHSAS 18001, giving you a good understanding of how these standards can impact and benefit your organization. You'll also learn to apply occupational health and safety standards and raise awareness in the workplace.

Why do I need it?

The certificate is designed for anyone who wants an occupational health and safety qualification. It is also aligned with BS OHSAS Auditor and Lead Auditor training courses, giving you a starting point for further learning. You will get a better understanding of how health and safety management systems work and how they can improve working conditions and performance. You will also learn to evaluate existing health and safety procedures and policies in your organization, identifying ways to improve these and align them with regulations and industry standards.

How will I benefit?

A qualification in occupational health and safety management systems will show you how to give customers, staff and suppliers greater confidence in the way you run your business. You will identify workplace hazards, contribute to risk and safety assessments, and help to put in place measures that will create a safer working environment. You can also help to build a framework for future legal and regulatory compliance, cutting the cost and time implications of future workplace injuries and illness.

What will I learn?

The course is delivered online and culminates in modular written assignments. You will complete learning modules on the background of health and safety management systems; evaluating health and safety standards within your organization; understanding the benefits; and sharing knowledge across your organization.
