

BS OHSAS 18001 Occupational Health and Safety Management Systems Lead Auditor

What is it?

A BS OHSAS 18001 Occupational Health and Safety Management System can pave the way for optimum working conditions across your organization. And effective health and safety management is achieved when the system's performance is monitored and audited. To do this well, in-depth knowledge of the BS OHSAS 18001 series empowers you to understand the principles and processes that can improve process safety, risk management and more. You'll learn all of this on our lead auditor course.

Why do I need it?

Quality occupational health safety management leads to process safety and a system encompassing occupational health and risk management – audits are critical to continually improving your BS OHSAS 18001 management system. Leading an internal, supplier or third party audit allows you to assess all existing health and safety processes, identifying gaps in performance that prevent continuing compliance or improvement. And as a lead auditor you will have the know-how to identify and close these gaps.

How will I benefit?

With BS OHSAS 18001 you can boost customer, staff, stakeholder, and supplier confidence in the way you manage health and safety across your organization. You will create a framework to work towards statutory compliance, and demonstrate the strengths of your business reputation. Once you have a robust health and safety framework in place you can reduce workplace accidents and illness that cost both time and money. Better working conditions will lead to motivated staff and better performance.

What will I learn?

This five-day course will not only consolidate your knowledge of BS OHSAS 18001, it will also help you understand the standard's requirements from an auditor's point of view. You'll get to grips with the principles of health and safety management, learning what it takes to plan, conduct and report on an audit. And you'll become confident managing teams of auditors in your organization or as part of an internal, second party or third party audit.
