ISO 14001 Environmental Management Systems Lead Auditor (IEMA Approved)

What is it?

ISO 14001 management systems put environmental best practice at the heart of your operations, allowing your business to grow sustainably. The way you monitor – or audit – the system's performance is critical to meeting ISO 14001 requirements. This course has been approved by the Institute of Environmental Management and Assessment (IEMA) and will give you the skills to lead the audit process and stay at the forefront of maintaining environmental standards across your organization.

Why do I need it?

Auditing is an effective way to keep improving your ISO 14001 environmental management system. As your business grows and evolves, so must the way you manage its impact on the environment – helping your business to remain compliant and sustainable. An ISO 14001 lead auditor can assess all areas of your business and measure how they contribute to your environmental management system. The audit findings will help you identify and close performance gaps, making sure you get the best from your business.

How will I benefit?

With ISO 14001 environmental management you can streamline the way you work and cut costs in the process – and leading the audit process will help you make sure this system stays effective. You will benchmark your processes and policies against internationally recognized standards. And you'll understand that auditing is about improvement as well as meeting ISO 14001 requirements. This course will also contribute towards registration for the BSI Registered Auditor and IEMA qualifications.

What will I learn?

This five-day course will consolidate your knowledge of ISO 14001 and make you a leader in environmental management system auditing best practice. Role play, workshops and practical exercises will give you the skills to lead and manage audit teams and programmes – assessing management systems in line with ISO 14001. You will learn to analyse environmental impacts and processes, and plan, lead and report on audits. And you'll be recognized within your business as an authority on environmental management systems best practice and emerging trends.
