Implementing ISO/IEC 27001 Information Security Management Systems

What is it?

ISO/IEC 27001 information security management helps you protect all your company data. It provides a framework for you to remove the threat of security breach by measuring and reducing information security risks. You may have already completed our introduction to ISO/IEC 27001 training or be familiar with the international standard. So now you can take next steps towards implementing your own ISO/IEC 27001 information security management system.

Why do I need it?

You want to apply the principles of ISO/IEC 27001 to your business, but you do not have an information security system in place yet. And this training course is designed to help you begin the implementation process from scratch. You will interpret ISO/IEC 27001 requirements and apply these to your business. And we will guide you in using the key processes, policies and procedures, from planning to implementing and preparing your ISO/IEC 27001 information security management systems for assessment.

How will I benefit?

If you understand the scope of the ISO/IEC 27001 standard, you will also understand how it can impact the way you manage your company and customer data – for the better. And information security management system allows you to demonstrate that you have robust data protection policies in place throughout your business, building customer trust and empowering you to innovate and grow.

What will I learn?

This three-day course will consolidate your knowledge of ISO/IEC 27001 and help you understand how to build an information security management system. You will become familiar with the scope of the standard and identify the roles, responsibilities, risks, objectives and controls specific to your business. Become confident writing security policies and planning your implementation programme from start to assessment. We will be with you every step of the way.
