

Energy Management training

ISO 50001 Internal Auditor

What is it?

The international standard ISO 50001 Energy Management is regarded by many as the best practice framework to manage your energy performance and address your energy costs. It can also help you to reduce your environmental impact and meet emissions reductions targets. It provides a structured approach towards measuring and monitoring how much energy you use. You can identify ways to cut your energy use and change how you operate to improve overall performance. ISO 50001 also drives technical and behavioural practices in pursuit of energy performance.

Why do I need it?

The auditing process is critical to continually improving your energy management system. As your business grows or evolves over time, so must the way you use energy. Internal audits help you to assess whether every aspect of your system continues to meet the ISO 50001 standard. Internal auditing skills help you identify where you can improve your energy performance.

This is an excellent experience before enrolling on the Lead Auditor course for Energy.

What will I learn?

This two-day course will show you how to constructively interrogate compliance with ISO 50001 requirements. You will review how much you already know about the standard, close gaps in your knowledge and consider ISO 50001 requirements in the context of an audit. You'll also learn to plan, perform and report on an internal audit. And you'll understand how these findings inform action to improve your energy management system.

Our tutors will help you identify practices and responsibilities that are critical to a successful internal audit – giving you confidence to fulfil them.

Upon completion of this course, students will be able to:

- Identify the principles of auditing and auditor responsibilities
- Plan an internal audit for an energy management system
- Conduct informal opening and closing meetings
- Conduct an audit based on good process identification, sampling and questioning
- Provide verbal and written feedback
- Construct and document concise nonconformities
- Report the audit effectively
- Follow-up on corrective actions
