Significant Changes

Leadership

Senior management must be able to demonstrate an understanding of business environment and to have a grasp of the organization's internal strengths and weaknesses on how these could impact on the ability to deliver their products or services to meet customer requirements.

Risks & Opportunities

Risk management replaces preventive action. The organization should plan actions to address these risks and opportunities, how to integrate and implement the actions into its management system processes and evaluate the effectiveness of these actions.

New High Level Structure (HLS)

Brings a common framework to all management systems. This helps to keep consistency, align different management system standards, and apply common language across all standards.

New Requirements

Communication and Awareness

People working under an organization's control should be aware of the policy, objectives, implications of non-conformities etc. The communication plan can include a variety of mediums including briefings, meetings, seminars, conferences and newsletters.

Objectives and Measurement

Objectives should include plans on how to achieve them as well as how the results will be evaluated. The organization must determine who will be responsible for the delivery of the objectives, resources required, what needs to be done and by when.
