Why the BSI Kitemark makes sense

The BSI Kitemark helps you to differentiate your products and make them easily identifiable as being accurate and reliable and having been evaluated by a trusted independent third party. Other benefits include:

Reassurance: The BSI Kitemark is one of the oldest and best known quality marks in the world. Independent assessment on an on-going basis gives specifiers and procurement professionals the reassurance that the relevant requirements are met or exceeded.

Quality: BSI Kitemark certification is voluntary. This means that Kitemark holders are making a strong public commitment to quality that gives them confidence in their products and processes.

Confident Procurement: IPC-A-610 is widely recognized in purchasing documentation. The BSI Kitemark for IPC-A-610 enables a CEM to show both compliance and capability to the customer. This is further backed up by the authority of a third party's ongoing, independent assessment and inspection of boards.

Gain access to global markets

The BSI Kitemark is not just recognized and demanded in the UK; it has high levels of global recognition, particularly in regions such as the Middle East.
