New AIMD Position Paper on MRI Conditionality now available

Application for MRI conditional status for your Medical Device involves a lot more than just measuring device behaviour in a scanner. It also requires careful consideration, characterisation and mitigation of multiple new and unique risks and benefits to support claims of "state of the art".

Our AIMD Team has just released a new Position Paper incorporating feedback derived from many MR conditional applications for AIMD and other implantable devices. Similar considerations as presented in the paper can be applied to a wide range of device types.

Performance evaluation under IVDR | New white paper available for download

Performance evaluation is a critical part of verification and validation of product performance that is recorded in the supporting technical documentation required to place an in vitro diagnostic device (IVD) on the EU market.
