------------------------------	--

Please note:

By nominating a representative onto on any standards-making committee/panel you are accepting to work according to the principles outlined in both B S 0 and the Standards-Makers Policy and all other applicable policies. This role description provides further details about your organization’s specific role within standards-making.

Nominated representatives can be employees of the Nominating Organization, volunteers from amongst the organization’s membership / stakeholders or third-party contractors employed for this purpose; this will be determined by the Nominating Organization itself.

A nomination from a bona fide Nominating Organization does not constitute a right to be on the committee / be a committee member nor does it constitute a right to stay on a committee. The individual being nominated will still be reviewed for their suitability for the committee. If the nominee is not already on another committee, they must themselves submit a Standards-Makers Application Form for the nomination to be considered. The ultimate decision about who can join or remain on a committee rests with BSI. One individual may represent the same Nominating Organization on more than one committee and one individual may represent different Nominating Organizations on different committees.

As part of its commitment to developing sustainable and inclusive standards, B S I encourages applications from all interested parties. We welcome applications from any potential users of the standard and any stakeholder group or community affected (directly or indirectly) by the use of a standard where the needs of that group or community have been traditionally less represented and understood. We encourage all B S I Nominating Organizations to consider the diversity of their members and / or stakeholders when nominating representatives to committees and when providing their representatives with their brief.

This role description is a general description for all Nominating Organizations and always applies including for those organizations taking on additional roles / responsibilities or opportunities within standards development / with B S I.

1 Role Profile

1.1 Scope / Responsibilities

Alongside the core responsibilities in section 7.3 of B S 0, a Nominating Organization is expected to:

- Identify standards / committees relevant to your organization's purpose and to your members / stakeholders.
- Identify individuals with knowledge and experience relevant to the standards / committees you have identified and nominate them to represent your organization and its members / stakeholders.
- Engage with your nominated representatives in order to inform their work on the committee(s) on which they serve as required by section 7.3 of B S 0. This includes ensuring they have an understanding of the wider views and needs of your organization's members / stakeholders in order to be able to represent these on the committee.
- Ensure B S I has an up-to-date, named point of contact at your organization for the management your nominated representatives and so B S I can provide you with information you need to fulfil your role and get the most out of being a Nominating Organization.
- Insofar as possible, support your nominated representatives with being able to attend meetings.
- Share your / your members' or stakeholders' expertise, knowledge and experience with your nominated representatives to support their work on committees.
- Understand and adhere to B S I's policy on intellectual property rights as per section 9.5 of B S 0.
- Attend training sessions relevant to your role, in person or online, as needed.

- Request / participate in meetings with B S I about your Nominating Organization role as and when needed.

2 Annex A – Additional roles / opportunities

2.1 Roles and opportunities

The additional roles / opportunities for Nominating Organizations include:

- Providing technical support,
- Sponsorship of B S I PAS and / or Flex Standards,
- Promoting your organization,
- Earning recognition.

NB:

Some of these roles and opportunities may also be open to those who are not Nominating Organizations. Additional policies may also be applicable for these roles and it is each individual role holder's responsibility to ensure they are acting in accordance with all applicable policies.

2.1.1 Provide technical support

Nominating Organizations should have privileged insight into the standards which their nominated representatives helped to develop which gives them a unique position from which to offer advice and support to those using / adopting the standard. Nominating Organizations may wish to support users of a standard with technical questions about its content and / or application as well as with interpretation of the standard. B S I facilitates and governs the standards development process and as such is a first point of contact for questions about the standard and these can generally be directed to the committee for their consideration / response. However, some users of a standard need support which goes beyond the bounds of the committee's responsibilities. Nominating Organizations represented on the committee responsible for the standard have the opportunity to provide this support. It is for each organization to determine if and how they wish to provide this support and to whom; for example organizations may choose to do so only for their members / stakeholders or for an additional fee, etc. If B S I is aware that a Nominating Organization is willing to provide this advice, we can advise those with queries of this nature of the organizations' names.

2.1.2 Sponsor a B S I PAS or Flex

B S I PAS's and Flexes are fast-track standards that are developed through an expert consulting service from B S I. Sponsoring a PAS or a Flex enables an organization to raise their profile, benchmark quality, influence the marketplace, create solutions and show leadership. For more information about PAS standards click here and for Flex standards click here.

2.1.3 Promote your organization

You are welcome and encouraged to let your members / stakeholders know that you support (are involved in) the development of standards that matter to them to ensure their needs are represented. Supporting the development of standards that impact your members / stakeholders can be one of the ways in which you provide member benefit and / or meet key organizational objectives. In addition, all B S I Nominating Organizations have the opportunity to have a stand in our Knowledge Marketplace exhibition at our two annual Standards Conferences which take place in May and November. There is no charge to have a stand at the Standards Conferences and Nominating Organizations are also welcome to propose and lead conference discussions / sessions. The only thing B S I asks in return is that you promote the Standards Conferences to your audiences.

2.1.4 Earn recognition

All B S I Nominating Organizations are eligible for nomination for the Nominating Organization Best Practice Award, which is part of the BSI Standards Makers Awards. These awards recognize exceptional contributions to standards-making. The winners are revealed at the awards ceremony which takes place as part of the May Standards Conference. (NB: Your nominated representatives are also eligible for Standards Makers Awards which recognize exceptional contributions by individuals.)
